La naturalidad de un arquitecto An architect's naturality

Sólo el clima determina en qué lugar de la vivienda hay que permanecer, afuera o adentro; ambos son un solo espacio. El paisaje y el mobiliario se encargan de que sea así. La obra lleva la firma de Pepe Torres, un arquitecto ibicenco que entiende su labor como una acción de proteccionismo a la naturaleza.

The climate is the only factor that determines where to remain in a house, inside or outside; both of them are just spaces. Landscape and furniture assumes it to make this real. The work is signed by Pepe Torres, an architect from Ibiza who keeps in mind that his labour is an action to protect nature.

Ésta es una de las inesperadas casas de Ibiza, Inesperadas porque se llega a ella después de ascender por un camino entre el bosque de pinos y sabinas; un camino que se abre sólo después de atravesar el muro de entrada a la casa. A partir de ese momento, aparece la linea azul del horizonte. La firma una persona tan natural como su idea de la arquitectura, el ibicenco Pepe Torres. This is one of those unexpected houses in thiza since you reach it after climbing through a path between a pine forest and a bush forest, a path that just gets opened after the extrance will of the house. In this point the blue horizon line appears. Paredes cruzadas

Un juego de paredes, a modo de planos cruzados, juegan a formar volúmenes en la entrada. Atravesada la puerta principal, el pásieje es introduce en la casa mediante unas cristaleras alertas al mar dejando en anecdota el propio interior. El concepto viene reflorado por el pavimiento, cemento contínuo desde el acceso y hasta la piscina del taterales desbordantes.

Crossed walls

A set of walts disposed like crossed plans form volumes playfully at the entrance. Once you have crossed the main entrance, the tanexcape gets unside the house through peer showcases to the sea by learning the inferior as a simple anecdate. The concept gets enforced with the prevenient, continuous concrete from the entrance us in the over horders assumption portains.

El arquitecto // the arquitect, Pepe Torres

La casa llegó antes

La vivienda y sus anexos se desarrollan en diversos niveles. La casa principal cuenta con planta y piso, y en un nivel inferior hay distintas habitaciones y servicios. Los domitorios y baños mantienen el criterio de apertura al paísaje, de modo que durante todo el recorrido el bosque, o el mar, permanece como fondu escenográfico. En el diseño se ha buscado potenciar las sensaciones que provocan tanto ese paísaje como los huecos que se van abriendo en las paredes.

La casa permanece allí lejos de agredir al bosque que llegó antes que la arquitectura. En realidad, parece haberse construido para facilitar a quien la ocupe el acceso al horizonte.

The house was first

The house and its attachments are developed in different levels. The main house has two levels, and there is an inferior level level inferent rooms and tolets. Bedrooms and bathrooms keep the open landscape element, so when you go over the house the forest are the sea remain as the background. The designing looks for strong-sensations thanks to the landscape and the wholes on the walls. The house remains there for way from hurting the forest, present before the auchitecture. In fact, it seems that it has been build in order to get easy the access to the horson for those who live there.
